

Unionville Library Storytime - September 29th 2017 - Dragons!

What child's imagination isn't captured by these fire-breathing (or not?) fantasy beasts. From book-loving dragons to beach-dragons, these stories livened up Storytime at the Library, and are sure to do so at home as well.

Do not bring your dragon to the library written by Julie Gassman ; illustrated by Andy Elkerton.

Rhyming books are always appreciated at Storytime, and a rhyming book about libraries is even better. Couple that with a bold and colorful art style and this tale about why dragons don't belong in the library will captivate young readers or listeners ears and eyes.

When a dragon moves in written by Jodi Moore ; illustrated by Howard McWilliam.

--

I would liken this book to the "if you give a mouse (or pig, or moose) a cookie (or pancake or muffin)" series for how the action flows. While it doesn't follow the exact chain-of-events actions that those books create, this book has it's own manic energy as a young boy builds a sandcastle so perfe...

Duncan the story dragon

Amanda Driscoll.

Duncan the dragon loves to read but his tendency to breath fire when he gets excited means he's never finished a book. A flowing art style and simple story about finding a friend with shared interests makes this a fun Storytime read, and it doesn't hurt that the shared interest is reading.

Not your typical dragon

by Dan Bar-el ; illustrated by Tim Bowers. --

This one wasn't read at Storytime due to length but is a recommended read-at-home book to continue the theme.

Young Crispin Blaze is supposed to breath fire for the first time on his 7th birthday, but fire isn't what comes out of his mouth. This humorous story will keep young ones guessing at what...
