

BKLYN BookMatch: Sitcoms, Comedians, Maps, Travel & Magical Realism

A patron asked for reading materials about these 5 subjects. The librarian who decided to tackle this request is perhaps overly-well-read in the history of American comedy and knows quite a bit about sitcoms and reads lots of travel non-fiction; his experience with maps is limited to folding them pretty well and he thought 'magical realism' was what Penn and Teller did. Will he be able to help the patron with their request? Find out!

MODERN FAMILY : the untold oral history of one of television's groundbreaking sitcoms.

FREEMAN, MARC.

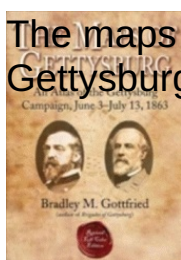

This book, written with the participation of the full cast and crew, has received excellent reviews from members on the website Goodreads.com, including some devoted "Modern Family" viewers.

Immortals of Tehran : a novel

Araghi, Ali, author.

The maps of Gettysburg : an atlas of the Gettysburg campaign, June 3-July 13, 1863

Gottfried, Bradley M.

Sicilian odyssey

Francine Prose.

Sicily first entered my consciousness as a teen, through movies like "The Godfather" and the eponymous style of pizza. As I grew older, I learned that an enormous number of early-20th century Italian immigrants came from this island, a region which has been raided, plundered, and ultimately neglected...

I'm dying up here

William Knoedelseder.

One of many excellent books about comedy, this one is specifically devoted to the L.A. scene of the 1970s. Much of the action is centered around Mitzi Shore's legendary Comedy Store club. David Letterman, Elaine Bosler, Jay Leno, Richard Pryor, Andy Kauffman, and others are here either in the narra...
