

Copy of Wordless Picture Books

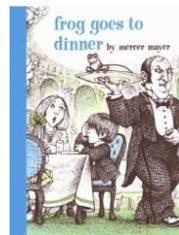

Two of the components of a child's reading readiness are their comprehension and their interpretation. We can assist preschoolers with reading readiness by providing opportunities for them to read pictures and consider the sequence of events. Reading pictures includes noticing what is in the picture, what the characters are doing, the weather or time of day and other details (i.e. the color of a character's clothing). We would also a child to interpret the scene. We can ask questions such as what do you think these people are doing?

Created by Patron587329

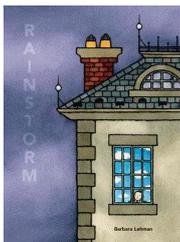

A ball for Daisy

by Chris Raschka. --

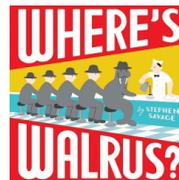

Frog goes to dinner

by Mercer Mayer.

Rainstorm

Barbara Lehman.

Where's Walrus

by Stephen Savage. --

The chicken thief

B eatrice Rodriguez. --

Chalk

by Bill Thomson. --

Copy of Wordless Picture Books

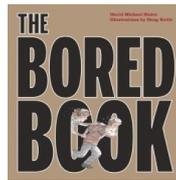

Two of the components of a child's reading readiness are their comprehension and their interpretation. We can assist preschoolers with reading readiness by providing opportunities for them to read pictures and consider the sequence of events. Reading pictures includes noticing what is in the picture, what the characters are doing, the weather or time of day and other details (i.e. the color of a character's clothing). We would also a child to interpret the scene. We can ask questions such as what do you think these people are doing?

Created by Patron587329

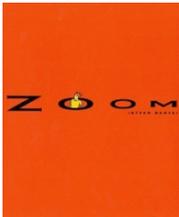

Leaf

ideas, sound effects, and pictures by Stephen Michael King.

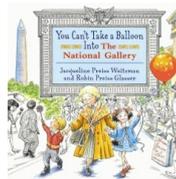

The bored book

David Michael Slater ; illustrations by Doug Keith. --

Zoom

Istvan Banyai.

You can't take a balloon into the National Gallery story by Jacqueline Preiss Weitzman ; pictures by Robin Preiss Glasser.