Diario di una mamma giornalista

Barbara Palombelli.

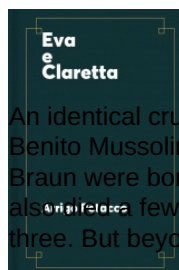

Through a series of letters to her children, Barbara Palombelli recounts with humor and simplicity the Italian chronicles of the eighties and nineties, the encounters and clashes with the protagonists of politics, journalism and current events.

Volario

Alfredo Cattabiani.

A phantasmagoric journey through time and space, in search of myths, symbols, legends, proverbs, festivals, literary and figurative works inspired by winged beings; a journey which opens before the eyes of the fantastic scenery of the reader, men and imaginary creatures are interwoven into history,...

Eva e Claretta

Arrigo Petacco.

An identical cruel fate has marked the lives of the lovers of Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler. Claretta Petacci and Eva Braun were born a few days apart in February 1912 and also died a few days apart (April 1945) at the age of thirty-three. But beyond these striking coincidences, to unite their f...

Michelangelo, io sono fuoco

Costantino D'Orazio.

Art historian Costantino D'Orazio sheds light on the shadows that surround the artist Caravaggio, rereading his masterpieces with spontaneous and captivating style. To truly understand Caravaggio one must abandon the canonical interpretation and look at his masterpieces with new eyes, so as to not m...

Pompei áe viva

Eva Cantarella, Luciana Jacobelli.

A narrative of Pompeii that focuses on the story of relics, costumes (the models of housing, public services, leisure), family life, religious cults. Going beyond testimony and available documents, the authors go back to real-life stories of love relationships and political relations.

Jacobelli inve...
