

November Park Slope Staff Picks!

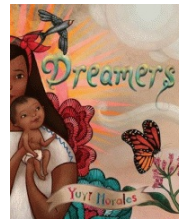

Here is the Park Slope Library's staff picks for November 2018!

Created by MarleneM

Jurassic world. Fallen kingdom

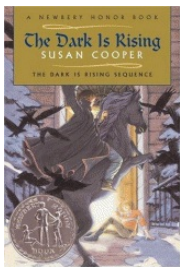

This movie is a fun look at the end of the dinosaurs as we saw them in the other Jurassic Park movies.

Dreamers

Morales, Yuyi, author.

Inspired by the author/illustrator's own immigration story, this picture book is about a mother and child who come to the United States from Mexico and find a wonderful haven for their dreams on the shelves of the public library. The illustrations are colorful and richly detailed, and the story is o...

The dark is rising

Cooper, Susan.

A personal favorite from childhood, The Dark is Rising is a fun and engaging tale of magic, mythology, and a harrowing battle between good and evil. It was first published in the 1970s, but continues to feel relevant and contemporary (save the technology of the day). This is technically the second b...

The four agreements : a practical guide to personal freedom

Ruiz, Miguel, 1952-

A Toltec philosopher describes in very simple and practical terms how to gain personal freedom.

The woman in white

Collins, Wilkie, 1824-1889.

There is a new PBS adaptation of this classic, and I first read it decades ago. The Woman In White is a gripping, hard-to-put-down example of early Victorian "sensation fiction" and often credited as one of the first mysteries. It's also noteworthy for introducing the use of different points of view...