

LOST Book List Pt. 1 - Sawyer's List

These are the books Sawyer is seen reading throughout the TV show Lost's 6 season run. Sawyer was easily the most voracious reader on the show, and I feel it is only right he gets first crack at the list. There are too many books depicted on Lost to be able to list them all in one list. I have split the lists up into 4 easy to find groups.

"Bad Twin" is fiction within fiction. Sawyer read the manuscript of this book in season 2, but the actual book was later released as a spin-off. It is written by fictional author, referenced in Lost, Gary Troupe.

Lancelot: A Novel

A book about the crime of a man blowing up his house to kill his wife, and the feeling of justification that followed, much like Kate.

Wrinkle in time

by Made I L'Engle

A book Sawyer is seen reading all the way back in season 1. The book is about time travel and a missing father. It also has a number of references to the biblical character of Jacob.

The Invention of Morel

Sawyer reads this in season 4. The plot concerns a fugitive surviving on a desert island.

The chosen

by Chaim Potok.

Ben found this book in Sawyer's belongings in episode 6, season 6. More a reference to its title than its actual content.

Are you there God? It's me, Margaret

Judy Blume.

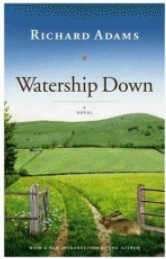

Referenced in the episode "The Whole Truth," season 2. A possible metaphor about the "new" Sawyer considering the book is for preteen girls to better understand their changing bodies.

Watership Down

Richard Adams ; [with a new introduction by the author].

A very telling book when applied to Lost. Sawyer is seen with it on several occasions, and he refers to it as a cute story "about bunnies." Boone accuses him of stealing it. The story is an allegory about rabbits trying to survive many trials as they try to find "home" and details the cyclic nature...

Of mice and men

John Steinbeck.

This book appears a number of times, with both Ben and Sawyer quoting from it in "Every Man for Himself." Sawyer tells the Man in Black that it is his favorite book. A dark look into the inner mind of Sawyer, indeed.

The fountainhead

Special introduction by the author ; afterword by Leonard Peikoff. --

Sawyer is seen reading this in "Par Avion," season 3.
